Publishing research work is one of the most important way by which scientists communicate with the peer groups worldwide. In recent times, there has been an increasing aspiration to publish research from the developing world too. Though, performing a research study is challenging in itself, writing it for publication is the final frontier that can be daunting. Scientific writing encompasses art as well as science and to communicate professionally at the international level, we have to constantly upgrade ourselves to meet the benchmark of scientific publishers. The LaTeX is a powerful tool that has been designed for creation of technical and scientific documentation. It is the de facto standard for communication and publication of scientific documents.
